TANGO INCENTIVE TO CHEERFULNESS

New Haven, Oct. 25.-As an incentive to cheerfulness, William Mc-Andrews, principal of the Washington Irving high school in New York, told the Connecticut state school teachers at their annual convention today, to dance the tango, bunny hug, or any modern dance they lik-ed. As another aid to cheerfulness, he advised the teachers to wear their best gowns to school. "If you have only two," he said, save your second best for Sunday."

"Well," said calm hearted Ben, "you will admit that he lost his temper and pounded the rock instead of speaking to it as commanded, and he stormed at the people and called them a lot of rebels. Considerable interest has been manifested in this series of unsectarian bible lectures. The subjects have been attractive, and the speakers able men. The subject of the closing lecture is: "Two Salvations, but no Second Chance." Many are commenting on the "Second Chance" theory, some claiming that those who live wickedly here will get another chance hereafter, while others think that only one chance will be afforded to anyone. This is said to be the most interesting lecture of the series, with an able Bible scholar for the speaker, and a lively theme for dis-
